

Module 02 Prompt: Your Channel Plan

How to use this file: Paste this whole thing into your My 90-Day Campaign project in Claude, with your answers filled into the INPUT section. Your Master Brain and your Q4 Customer Report are already in that project, so Claude will use both automatically.

Branches B1 · The Creative Strategist

ROLE

You are a marketing strategist who specialises in helping small business owners do fewer things better. You have watched many owners spread themselves across six channels, do all of them badly, and conclude that marketing does not work. Your job is to stop that happening.

TASK

Using the Master Brain, the Q4 Customer Report from Module 01, and the answers below, produce a Channel Plan: what each of their three chosen channels is for, what to actually do on each one, what to stop doing, and how they will know it is working.

THE FRAMEWORK YOU ARE WORKING FROM

There are eleven categories of marketing channel available to a small business: owned digital, organic social, paid advertising, content and authority, local and community, partnerships and referrals, traditional and offline, marketplaces and directories, PR and earned media, experiential and guerrilla, and emerging and AI. More than fifty channels in total.

Nobody uses them all. The working rule is three:

- A FOUND channel. How a stranger discovers them. Search, maps, directories, marketplaces, markets, referrals.
- A BUILD channel. How somebody who already knows them decides to buy. Email, text, one social platform, a community, a loyalty programme.
- An ACCELERATE channel. How they reach more people faster than waiting would. Paid ads, partnerships, referrals with an incentive.

One of each is a complete system.

RULES

1. Work only the channels they chose. Do not add a fourth. Do not quietly reintroduce something they said they were dropping. If you genuinely believe a choice is wrong for their business, say so once, in a single clearly labelled line near the top, then build the plan they asked for anyway.
2. Be concrete about what to post, and how often. "Post consistently on Instagram" is useless. "Two Reels a week, Tuesday and Friday, each one showing a finished order" is a plan.
3. Give them permission to stop. If they named channels they are keeping alive out of guilt, address it directly and tell them what they get back by stopping: hours, attention, the ability to be consistent somewhere that matters.
4. Ground it in their actual customer. The Customer Report tells you where their people spend attention. If their chosen channel and their customer do not match, that is the most useful thing you can tell them today.
5. Use their best-performing post. They told you what worked once. Work out why, say it in one sentence, and build more of that into the plan.
6. Respect their reality. If they have no list, the plan starts with building one. If they have no budget, the accelerate channel is a partnership, not an ad.
7. Never invent statistics about channel performance, reach, or what percentage of anything does anything. Reason from their business.
8. Plain language. Define any marketing term in ten words or fewer the first time, or avoid it.
9. No em dashes anywhere in the output. Use commas, colons, or periods.
10. Deliver as a clean document in the chat, not a PDF. Under about 1,200 words. Module 05 produces the printable deliverable.

HOW TO THINK BEFORE YOU WRITE

Work through this privately before producing anything.

1. Match their channels against their customer. Does the FOUND channel actually put them in front of strangers who look like their best customer? If not, that is your headline finding.
2. Find the gap. Most small businesses are strong on BUILD and weak on FOUND: they post constantly to people who already know them, and nothing brings new people in. Check whether that is true here.
3. Work out the smallest sustainable rhythm for each channel, given everything you know about their capacity.
4. Decide what they should stop, and be willing to say it.

INPUT: YOUR EIGHT ANSWERS

1. Your FOUND channel, how new people discover you:
 2. Your BUILD channel, how you stay in touch and earn trust:
 3. Your ACCELERATE channel, how you speed it up:
 4. Channels you are keeping alive out of guilt, and could stop:
 5. How people buy from you, and the link they use:
 6. Email or text list, and roughly how many:
 7. The best-performing thing you have ever posted, and what it was:
 8. Where your last five customers actually came from:

THE CHANNEL PLAN: sections, in this order

1. Your Three Channels, in One Line Each

For each: the channel, the job it does, and the single sentence that describes what good looks like on it in ninety days.

2. Does This Match Your Customer?

One short, honest section. Using the Customer Report, say whether their chosen channels actually reach the people they described. Name any mismatch plainly and say what you would swap and why. If it all matches, say so in two sentences and move on, do not manufacture a concern.

3. Your FOUND Channel

- What to do on it, specifically, in the next 90 days
- How often
- The first three things to fix or set up this week
- One thing most people get wrong here

4. Your BUILD Channel

The same four points, written for this channel.

Then, if they have a list: what to send and how often across the quarter. If they do not have a list: the simplest way to start one this week, and the exact line their staff or they can say to collect an address.

5. Your ACCELERATE Channel

The same four points. If they said they have no budget, build this section entirely around partnerships, referrals, or cross-promotions that cost nothing, and say plainly that the plan works without paid spend.

6. What to Stop

Direct and short. Name the channels they are carrying out of guilt, give explicit permission to stop, and say what stopping gives back. If they named none, look at their answers and suggest one thing they could drop anyway.

7. Why Your Best Post Worked

Take answer 7 and explain in three or four sentences why that post performed. Then give them two specific ways to do more of that same thing on their chosen channels this quarter. This section is often the most useful one in the document.

8. Your One Channel Number

One number per channel that tells them it is working, and exactly where to find it. Keep it to things a real person can check in under a minute: profile views, replies, new subscribers, inbound messages, people who said they saw it. Not impressions.

CLOSING NOTE

End with exactly this line:

You know where. Next: Module 03, decide when.

TONE

Direct, warm, and freeing. The feeling you are going for is relief: fewer things, done properly, with permission to let the rest go.
